2.0 Statistical highlights about the arts in Alberta<sup>4</sup>

- In 2006, there were 12,000 artists in Alberta, representing 0.59% of the overall provincial labour force.
- Between 1991 and 2006 the number of artists in Alberta increased by 37%. The rate of growth in the number of artists was greater between 1991 and 2001 (31%) than between 2001 and 2006 (4%).
- In 2006, the median earnings of artists in Alberta are $13,000, less than half the typical earnings of all Alberta workers ($29,700).
- In 2006, of nine arts occupation groups, musicians and singers represent the largest group in Alberta with 3,500 individuals reporting earnings, followed by authors and writers (2,000), visual artists (1,700), artisans and craftspersons (1,500) and producers, directors, choreographers and related occupations (1,300).
- Albertans spent $3.0 billion on cultural goods and services in 2005, or 3.3% of total consumer spending in the province. The $3.0 billion in consumer spending on culture is nearly six times larger than the $540 million spent on culture in Alberta by all levels of government in 2003-04. This is the highest consumer-to-government spending ratio of all the provinces. On a per capita basis, Albertans' cultural spending is the highest of all provinces at $971 per resident.
- In 2005, the three most popular cultural and heritage activities in Alberta were reading newspapers (85% of the population 15 or older); watching a video (rented, purchased, VHS or DVD formats) (84%); and listening to music on CD's, cassette tapes, DVD audio discs, records, etc. (83%).
- In 2005, 38% of Albertans 15 or older (970,000 residents) attended a concert or performance by professional artists of music, dance, theatre or opera (excluding cultural festivals). This is slightly less than the Canadian rate of 41%.

Examples of Canada Council funding in Alberta<sup>5</sup>

The Canada Council supports the endeavours of professional artists and arts organizations through its programs. The following selection illustrates the scope of the activities supported by the Canada Council in Alberta.

A $5,500 grant was awarded to the Edmonton Literary Festival through the Alberta Creative Development Initiative: Grants to Organizations program to engage young adults in a dialogue about racism and genocide. The two-part initiative included a writing workshop and a series of readings with author Jane Springer. Through the project, students combined their readings with discussions about the issues that affect today's youth, particularly those living in Africa, Asia and the Middle East, and learned ways to preserve the honesty and integrity of voices while writing within a given context. Recognizing that "it is more important than ever for students to see writing and reading as vital means of shaping their understanding of the world, and of changing that world for the better," organizers of the Festival hope to reproduce similar projects in the near future.

In 2008-09, the Calgary Opera Association was awarded a two-year operating grant totalling $900,000 through the Opera/Music Theatre Program: Multi-year and Annual Funding. With the vision to be identified as one of Canada's most respected and successful opera companies, the Calgary Opera will use the grant to actively promote opera within the community, as well as on a national and international scale. The company will also continue to produce well-recognized operas and other musical entertainment. In addition to these goals, the Calgary Opera remains determined to continue supporting partnerships, educational programming and outreach activities in hopes of ensuring that its successful track record persists well into the future.

First-time grant recipient, Christine Cheung of Calgary was awarded $20,000 through the Assistance to Visual Artists: Project Grants program to support her continued exploration of artwork around the notion of diaspora. Through her painting, drawing and photography, Cheung reflects upon her personal Chinese-Canadian experience and makes intuitive references to feelings of diasporas and the daily instabilities of life, both in one's national identity and everyday choices. Cheung will use the grant to assist in her travels during a two-month residency in Austria in September and October 2009. This project will enable the emerging artist to expand her network on an international level, thus creating opportunities for potential future collaborations.

With a $65,000 grant from the Alberta Creative Development Initiative: Grants to Organizations program, the Red Deer Museum + Art Gallery planned to create and present The Farm Show, an innovative exhibition of contemporary works that explore issues facing agriculture in Central Alberta. The Gallery's mandate is to create exhibitions and programs which provide thought-provoking interactions with real objects in the areas of cultural understanding, science and human development. This exhibit was planned to raise public awareness of the issues and articulate a call to action regarding the importance of sustainable agriculture to global well-being. Organizers also hope to demonstrate the important role that artists play in identifying issues, and the use of creative action to understand them.

Through the Dance Touring Grants: International program, $17,000 was awarded to Edmonton's Usha Gupta to tour Nari...nari...nari – my love, an Indian and modern dance fusion performance, in India from December 2008 to January 2009. This project explores love from a woman's perspective and focuses on three models that correspond to the stages of human life: romantic love, unconditional love, and meditative love. As a producer and artist, Gupta's goal is to explore the blending of modern and traditional dance forms, while sharing her artistry and knowledge with culturally diverse audiences from around the world. For Gupta and the other participating dancers, the tour was an excellent opportunity for future collaborations.

Calgary poet and performance artist Kirk Ramdath received $13,500 through the Alberta Creative Development Initiative: Grants to Individuals program to develop a project entitled Walls. The project explores a feminist identity from a male perspective in the context of a struggle between feminism and patriarchy. In his work, Ramdath acknowledges that four walls and a ceiling are necessary for a writer of any gender or social standing to have a room of his or her own; however, these walls can also be divisive. By discussing his admiration of women and his desire to understand how to love a woman, Ramdath hopes that his work will illuminate a beautiful truth in a search that often exposes tremendous pain and ugliness.

Edmonton's Scott Leithead received his first grant of $13,000 through the Grants to Professional Musicians (Individuals): Classical Music program to work with one of Africa's foremost choirs and document his musical experience overseas. Through 2008 into 2009, Leithead worked alongside numerous youth choirs from Namibia, South Africa, Botswana, Zambia, and Kenya, and researched traditional African music and performance practices. Through his research, Leithead hoped to advance his musical understanding of the connection between the voice and the body, the individuality of regional communities, and the efforts to promote inter-cultural cooperation. After his time spent in southern Africa, Leithead expressed his appreciation for such an incredible opportunity and acknowledged his tremendous growth as a music educator.

As a PhD Candidate in Archaeology at the University of Calgary, Latonia Hartery received her first grant of $20,000 through the Alberta Creative Development Initiative: Grants to Individuals program to produce a project entitled The House Trap. The House Trap is a short black-and-white film about a woman confined in an abusive relationship, who finds an escape linked to her most terrifying childhood memory. Basing the story on actual events in her family life, Hartery explores relationship dynamics, morality, abuse and emotional confinement through concepts of highlight and shadow detail, image contrast, and tonal range. For the artist, the project essentially serves as a pivotal step towards solidifying herself as a professional artist.

In 2008, Calgary's Roger Feria Jr. was awarded $2,000 as the winner of the Robert Fleming Prize, an annual prize awarded to the most talented Canadian music composer in classical music. While completing his doctoral studies in music at McGill University in Montreal, Feria Jr. participated in numerous private composition tutorials, seminars, and a doctoral colloquium as a means of broadening his skills and developing new techniques to become a well-rounded professional composer. With inspiration derived from Buddhist Sutras and ancient Chinese philosophies, Feria Jr. hopes to become a professor of music at a post-secondary institution as a way to inspire other young musicians to explore and create their own intelligent musical conversations.

Edmonton director and producer Carlo Ghioni received $20,000 through the Alberta Creative Development Initiative: Grants to Individuals program in Media Arts to produce a short animated film entitled Moonshine, which blends three different styles of animation to give the narrative a visual storyline. The story focuses on the life of young child of Métis descent whose dreams send him back to the tragic experiences of his ancestors, all soldiers who died fighting for Canadian morals and values that they did not share. By evoking the style of 1930s-era French cinematographers, Moonshine considers the human condition in a film that takes place simultaneously in the conflicted dimension of the present, in the imagination oriented to the future, and in the memories of the past.

Edmonton dance choreographer Geraldine Morita received a $1,200 grant through the Travel Grants to Dance Professionals program to travel to Tokyo to perform in the 10th annual Dance Ga Mitai International Dance Festival in August 2008. Over the course of the two-week event, Morita presented an excerpt from the 2007 production Water's Edge, an integrated video dance piece which blends contact improvisation with Noguchi taisho, a form of Japanese gymnastics. While in Tokyo, the artist also took the opportunity to work with world-renowned artist Hideo Arai to create a new dance production. Upon her return to Canada, Morita reported on the positive feedback her group received from the audience, and praised the experience as beneficial in making contacts for future international collaborations.

Deborah Kelman, a first-time grant recipient from Lethbridge, Alta., received $19,050 through the Alberta Creative Development Initiative: Grants to Individuals program to work on a set of beaded leggings, moccasins and an eagle fan with the purpose of producing an integrated performance piece. After completing a painting entitled Her Hands: a Tribute to Anna Mae Aquash, the artist was inspired to create the complete dance regalia, as depicted in her painting, to honour the tragic death of Anna Mae Aquash, a Mikmaq woman who died on a reservation in South Dakota in 1976. Through this project, Kelman hopes to gain recognition as a professional artist who provides a forum for cross-cultural healing and education within a contemporary context.

Through the Artists and Community Collaboration Program, Drew van Allen of Canmore, Alta., was awarded a $2,800 grant to collaborate with Elders of the Morley Aboriginal community, students, and cultural educators to create, record and remix traditional Stoney First Nation music. The project blends Stoney songs with hip-hop beats to inspire Aboriginal youth to embrace their cultural past, while increasing generational unity and understanding. Upon completion of the recordings in late 2009, participating students and Elders will perform their work in front of the Morley community. For van Allen, this project represents an important attempt to offer youth a creative environment in which they can explore the depth of their culture and build self-confidence.

Eva Colmers of Edmonton was awarded $15,000 through the Grants to Theatre Artists program to research life in Kangiqsujuaq, a remote village in northern Quebec. With this grant she also wrote Beneath the Ice, a play for young audiences which combines an adventure story with Inuit mythology. To develop the play, Colmers relied on her background in theatre, shadow puppetry, and filmmaking to create a powerful yet minimalist environment that appeals to broad audiences. Beneath the Ice happens through an outsider's perspective as a small boy discovers magic at the bottom of the ocean. After the world premiere in March 2009, Colmers was delighted by the positive comments she received from audience members and expressed a desire to continue writing youth-oriented theatre.

In 2008-09, Edmonton's Edmund Haakonson was awarded $18,600 to create a bronze sculpture reflecting ancient Greek athletic imagery and the Canadian hockey obsession, as part of the Alberta Creative Development Initiative: Grants to Individuals program. As ancient sculptures once represented an ideal to which all people aspired, Haakonson sought to impose contemporary cultural sensibilities on ideas of modern sport and individual achievement. This sculpture moves beyond the reference to hockey towards the stronger element of 'Canadian-ness,' acknowledging the ability of a Canadian to poke fun at him or her self. Recognizing its symbolic ties to sport and competition, Haakonson plans to display his half life-sized creation in Vancouver during the 2010 Olympic Winter Games.
